Figures to Look At iter in an Eastern journal furnish es the following calculation :

which, in 1866, one year after the close of the war of rebellion, amounted to $2,778,-286,173, has now been running on interest for nine years, having within that time been reduced to $2,256,013,431 in December, 1873. The interest paid to bondholders on this running indebtedness and cost of collection of taxes, has already amountd to about $2 000,000,000, still leaving the above enormous sum of over two b tions of money to be liquidated by further axation, the total debt having been reced in nine years only $517,217,692 In the creation of this national mmense fortunes were made by avarious men, many of whom now hold these bonds in large quantities, thus fattening on the public until the last dollar is paid in gold, or its equivalent. While the faith of the nation is pledged for the full payment of this debt sconer or later, it behooves the public, through their law makers, to fund the debt at the lowest possible rate of interest, as has been adopted in England with their governmen debt, bearing only three per cent inferest. At the above slow rate of paying off the national debt, at present rate of interest, it will take in all about forty years-ther the interest to be paid will, in the ag regate be about $5,000,000,000—then adding the original debt, say $2,500,000,000, and the American taxpayers will have to pay $7,500,000,000 as the cost of the war of the rebellion. Two-thirds of this immense amount will have to be paid to the bond-holders.

Our Book Table.

The Leonard Scott Publishing Company have just published their reprint of the Edinburgh Review for April.

The first article gives an account of the history, resources and geographical character of Eastern Toorkistan, sometimes incorrectly called Little Bokhara. This country, lying between India and Siberia, is a region of peculiar interest to England and Russia, both of which powers are making efforts to improve the lines of making efforts to improve the lines of communication, and establish commercial elations with Central Asia. In "Competitive examinations" we have a fair exhibition of the advantages are ects of the system now practiced in the English and Indian Civil Services. "Prince Bismarck and the Church of GEIGER" Rome" discusses the relations between Church and State in Prussia. It points out the altered conditions in which the strife between these two powers has been renewed; briefly sketches the policy of each up to the year 1870; and then treats at some laugth of the measures initiated Rismarck, finishing with a review of oatice and policy of which are represented as open to grave doubts. Other papers of interest are: "The Pasians," a work which is pronounced to be "a happy climax to a series of fictions which have conferred upon the anthor a lasting place in English literature;" a review of Max Muller's "Introduction to the Science of Religior," "The Hydraulics of Great Rivers," a valuable report of recent explorations in the Parana, Uruguay and La Plata Estuaries; and a review of the second and third, volumes of Wall Parana Pattarea. view of the second and third volumes of Froude's English in Ireland in the Eigh-teenth Century, particularly dwelling upon the movement for Irish Independence, cul-Dr. Schliemann's "Trojan Antiquities" C. comes in for an extended notice. If the many valuable and interesting objects which he has found are not what he claims for them, he has at least opened a field for reasonable to the control of th ield for research in a great measure new, and combing at once so much interest with difficulties and anomalies of so startling a character that we have little doubt it will afford a battlefield for archeologists and philologers for many years to come.

"The Past and the Future of the Whig Perty" endeavors to explain the cause of the untimely end of the Gladstone Administration, attributing it mainly to the deviation of the leader from the moderate liberal principles which we term Whig, to the extreme liberal principles which we term Radical.

The Phrenological Journal for July contains a list of topics which it would be difficult to improve, for the entertainment and instruction of its many readers. The matter is at once fresh, reasonable, crisp and earnest. Witness the following:—F. V. Hayden, the Geologist, with a fine portrait; The Dean of Chester, England, with portrait; Vice and Crime—a clear consideration of man's negligence of the natural laws: The Primeval Race Double-Sexed—a currons essay, yet founded on Sexed—a curious essay, yet founded on some not unsuand premises; Eyes, Their Differences and Significations—an elabo-Princences and Significations—an elaborate and fascinating paper—thirly illustrations; Agnes Worth, a story, which ladies will appreciate; A Summer's Vacation, which tells how a party of thirty enjoyed themselves in the Rocky Mountains, and gives numerous off-hand portraits; The Real Lady—a good pen portrait of a noble character; How to Govern and Train Children—Shall We Whip?—valuable suggestions to parents: Prof. -valuable suggestions to parents; Prof.
David Swing, with portrait—shows up that Chicago Divine; Portrait and Sketch of J. Edgar Thompson. A humorous cartoon, hitting a certain fashion, closes the number pleasantly. Price 30 cents; $3 a year. Address S. R. Wells, 389 Broaoway, New York.

We have just received from the Leonard Scott Publishing Company the May number of Blackwood's Magazine, which opin; with the continuation of "Valentine and his Brother." The interest of the atory increases as the boys and their mother, who have been so strangely sep-arated, are drawing very near to each

The article on "Heroules" was suggested by a recent picture—the Alcestis of Mr. Leighton—which the writer characterizes as one of the most beautiful modern pictures. It is illustrated with copious translations from the Alcestis and Frenzied Hercules of Euripides, and the Trachinias of Sophocles, all of which tragedies were founded on the legend of Hercules. The comparisons on the treatment of the subject by the two dramatists will be interesting to clean all readers.

"Convivtum Templare" is a festive scene somewhat in the style of the famous "Noctes Ambrosiana," and, like them, requiring minute local knowledge for full

The present series, No. V., of "International Vanities," freets of emblems.

"The word emblem, in its national application, represents to most of us a flag, and little else. But it has other meanings, too; less important and less self-evident, it is true, but which well merit to be remembered. Images of animals, badges, war-cries, cockades, liveries, coats-of-arms, tokens and tattooing, have all been accepted symbols of distinction between vaces," A brief description is given of these various symbols, followed by a very entertaining history of the French and other flaces.

very entertaining history of the French and other flags.

"Dates and Dates," by Lord Lytton, a clever off-hand plea for fable, by way of good-humored response to some recent criticisms on "Fables in Song."

In the "Budget and the Income-Tax" we are told that "there is hardly any subject within the range of English politics about which so much has been written and spoken as the Income-Tax, and there is hardly any subject about which the public mind is so little matured." A history of the tax in question follows this tory of the tax in question follows this remark, and we are assured, in conclusion, that it would be "extremely unwise to part with the system by which a considculty be raised."
